Once, there was a fox. He was very hungry. He went into the forest in search of food. He saw a flowing river. He stopped there to catch a fish from the river. But the river was very deep and the water was very cold. The fox was lazy. So he waited by the river side wishing to see somebody fishing.

Once, there was a fox.

Fortunately fox saw two cats fishing. He went near them. A huge fish was there on the ground. The two cats were arguing over their share. The fox decided to settle the dispute. The first cat said that he would need the bigger portion: "I pulled the fish out of water by its head. I put in a lot of effort, but my friend only pulled the tail. So I deserve the larger share."

Anand and Vikram were small boys. They were the students of class III. They went to school together. One day they found an old rope on the road when they were going to school. Each one of them wanted to have it for himself. They began to quarrel for the rope.

Anand held the rope at one end and Vikram at the other end. Both were trying to pull it away from each other. All of a sudden the rope broke and the two boys fell backwards into the mud.

An old man noticed it and laughed. He said, "That's what always happens to people who quarrel. They make a lot of noise over some useless things and in the end what do they gain? Nothing, except that they are covered with shame just as you two are covered with mud."
